

Aspects of Perceptual Experiences

In recent years, philosophy of perception receives increasing attention. It was originally motivated by epistemological interests, but the field has been by nature interdisciplinary. In this workshop, we would like to discuss three topics from multidisciplinary angles. Two talks will discuss traditionally philosophical topics with an eye to empirical work: the distinction between sensation and perception, and metaphysical implication of attention-related phenomena to metaphysics of perception. And the other talk will focus on the impact of recent work in philosophy of language to philosophy of perception.
